*Adjusted for Inflation by Re-Statement in Year 1995 Dollars

- The McAllen Economic Index declined again slightly in April slipping to 187.8 down from 188.0 in April (and a recent high of 188.3 in January), but up 3.1% from the April 2014 MEI of 182.2. Most local economic indicators were flat to lower for the month with the exception of the employment data which continues to reflect a moderate rate of job growth and steady decline in the unemployment rate.

- General real (inflation-adjusted) spending per April sales tax receipts was flat compared to April of a year ago, and the total through April is up by less than a percent compared to the first four months of 2014. Real auto spending was also down for the month, but is up by 3.7% for the year-to-date compared to the total through April of last year, which in turn was up by nearly 6% compared to the prior year.

- The rate of year-over-year job growth dipped to 1.7% in April (subject to slight revision with the release of the May data next month), the smallest of the year thus far (employment growth averaged 3% in the first quarter of 2015). The McAllen city unemployment rate remains firmly on the decline falling to 4.5% in April, its lowest level since April 2008, and down by nearly a full point compared to April of a year ago.

- Hotel/motel tax receipts in McAllen were down compared to a very strong total from a year ago; April 2015 lodging tax receipts were off by over 12% year-over-year -- however, the April 2014 total was up by nearly 30% compared to the prior year. Thus far in 2015 hotel/motel activity is up by about 2% compared to the January-April 2014 time period, which was stoutly improved (up over 11%) compared to the first four months of the prior year.

- Construction activity is also down compared to a strong number from 2014. The total dollar valuation of building permits issued in April across the metro area was down by about 13% compared to April of last year; however, the April 2014 permit valuation total was up by over 47% compared to the prior year. That pulled the year-to-date total into slightly negative territory, down 2.6% compared to the total through April of a year ago. New housing construction permits were off for the month as well, with about 16% fewer permits issued compared to April of a year ago. The year-to-date total is down slightly compared to the January-April 2014 total, which in turn was up by a strong 11.3% compared to the first four months of the prior year.

- Existing home sales were generally flat - down slightly for the month, up slightly for the year-to-date. The April monthly average price was down by about 1.6% compared to the April 2014 monthly average, which was up by a stout 6.3% compared to the prior year. The total dollar volume of residential real estate sales activity (adjusted for inflation) is down by about 2% through the first four months of the year. Again, though, activity was relatively strong last year with inflation-adjusted sales activity up by over 5% compared to the prior year.
